The Ferry Plaza Farmers' Market (FPFM) is a certified farmers' market operated by the Center for Urban Education about Sustainable Agriculture (CUESA) in accordance with state, county and local laws, for the benefit of farmers and consumers alike. Its fundamental purpose is to provide the community with a place to buy fresh produce directly from small-scale regional producers in a congenial atmosphere and to provide producers with a direct market for their goods. Further objectives derived from CUESA's mission include education about and support of regional sustainable food systems. A sustainable food system uses practices that are resource-conserving, socially just, humane, and economically viable and environmentally sound. Please see our website for more information: www.cuesa.org.

Briefly describe how your company supports a sustainable food system:
